Judges of the Nebraska County Courts are each appointed to six-year terms.^[6] Judges are re-elected in retention elections. To serve on this court, a judge must be a U.S. citizen, a district resident, 30 years of age or older, and a member of the state bar. They must also have five years of experience in state practice.^[7]

2012 judicial performance evaluation

Every two years, the Nebraska State Bar Association compiles responses from lawyers to evaluate judges in the state. Subjects are rated in seven categories, then a determination is made for whether the judge should be retained. The seven categories considered are: legal analysis; impartiality; attentiveness; opinions; judicial temperament and demeanor; appropriate communication; and timeliness.

95.2 percent of respondents stated that Judge Bazis should be retained in office. To read the full evaluation, see: Nebraska State Bar Association, 2012 Evaluation Results.
